

College of Pharmaceutical
Sciences and Drug Manufacturing
A college accredited by "NAQAAE"

HU 402

COURSE DESCRIPTION: -

This course of study explores how psychology as a discipline and practice may contribute to the understanding of human behavior either when individuals behave as individuals or in groups. Topics will include the definition of psychology and illustration of its fundamental and applied branches, personality and its different aspects, social environment and its elements, the interaction between personality and the environment, different psychological functions such as perception, memory and learning, socializes and their differential effects on individuals, application of psychology in the different domains of practice.

